 - implement programs and appropriate protective measures to control such risks, including appropriate monitoring of its potentially affected employees.
 - communicate in a reasonable manner to potentially affected individuals or organizations and the scientific community knowledge about health risks gained from its health programs and related studies.
 - determine at the time of employment and thereafter, as appropriate, the medical fitness of employees to do their work without undue risk to themselves or others.
 - provide or arrange for medical services necessary for the treatment of employee occupational illnesses or injuries and for the handling of medical emergencies.
 - comply with all applicable laws and regulations, and apply responsible standards where laws and regulations do not exist.
 - work with government agencies and others to develop responsible laws, regulations, and standards based on sound science and consideration of risk.
 - conduct and support research to extend knowledge about the health effects of its operations.
 - undertake appropriate reviews and evaluations of its operations to measure progress and to foster compliance with this policy.
 - provide voluntary health promotion programs designed to enhance employees' wellbeing, productivity, and personal safety. These programs should supplement, but not interfere with, the responsibility of employees for their own health care and their relationships with personal physicians. Information about employees obtained through the implementation of these programs should be considered confidential and should not be revealed to nonmedical personnel except at the request of the employee concerned, when required by law, when dictated by overriding public health considerations, or when necessary to implement the Alcohol and Drug Use policy.
